This is considered by some experts to be unfair because it requires subscribers (which are estimated to be over 100 million) to pay just so they can be allowed to post their own content onto the platform. The fact that this feature can be used to prevent people from sharing content which they should be allowed to post has also concerned some users. Another concern with this particular aspect of TikTok's business model is that it may be a violation of the app's terms and conditions as well as the policies of any app stores where TikTok is installed. To access TikTok, a user must agree to the app's terms and conditions when they have downloaded it onto their device. For example, users on both Google Play and the Apple Store agree not only to allow TikTok to access their location but also "to use your name, likeness, and voice in connection with commercial, sponsored or related content ("endorsements"), either identified or anonymous. You agree that if you wish for your Content to remain anonymous, or your public profile does not contain your real name, you will not use your real name in connection with any Endorsements." This suggests that a user may be required to pay in order to retain their anonymity while posting videos on TikTok (this is because the app may ask them to use their real name and/or add other details such as their age while posting their video). The term "endorsement" (as defined by the Oxford dictionary) means: "the action of publicly expressing approval and support of somebody/something by a gesture (such as a wave or an item of clothing) or words. The act of publicly advertising a product or service by an individual or organization.";

In another article published in the U.S., it was noted that "The TikTok app is raising safety concerns among parents of young users. It is trying to limit bullying and inappropriate content like nudity, but some families say the new policies are doing more harm than good." This article also indicates that "After several parents complained about inappropriate content, the company changed its policy on who could use the platform: People under 18 can use it only if they have parental consent, while ages 12-13 require written permission from a parent or legal guardian. Now, the app has more than 200 million users worldwide." This article was published on NBCNews.",

Some publications have reported on when TikTok has received funding, with one publication stating "The Beijing-based parent company of the messaging app started more than five years ago as a site for sharing short video clips. It is thought to have been the first social network that allows users to post videos — essentially short video films — aimed at helping them find friends and build real-life connections. The company was later renamed as ByteDance and announced it would launch an IPO in Hong Kong this month." This article was published on CNNMoney.",
